Encouraging new generations to move their faces from screens and to explore the world around them, count the stars in the sky and discover the beauty of nature is vital to raise a sense of curiosity in them. As Usturlab, the challenge that keeps our motivation alive starts right at this point. We always try to ignite curiosity in new generations.

Usturlab publications invite young explorers to embrace the universe. It encourages them to travel through the history of science and art, to get acquainted with philosophy, to explore the world outside, to gain different perspectives. In doing so, it promises them more time to spend outdoors and pursuits that will nurture their imagination as well as their minds.

We design books and board games for young explorers from the perspective provided by our experience in education. Our publications are prepared with the long-term work of experts in the fields of science, philosophy and art. We also design publications addressing the needs of various institutions on request.
